Stronger Than Steel.

A new metal alloy, "radium argenteum," has been discovered by two Tucson engineers. It is composed of copper, iron and small quantities of silver, radium and phosphorus. It is claimed to be of greater strength than steel, to be a better conductor than copper, to be nonoxidizable and cheap to manufacture. Its cost being about one-tenth that of bronze when made in large quantities. Its discovery is particularly interesting inasmuch as it was largely an accident. After spending nearly $20,000 in experiments, one of the inventors happened to throw a two shilling piece into the crucible. The coin supplied the ingredients needed to the proper fusion of the particles and the alloy resulted.
