gh Cops Big In Speed Events

Swelgert was a big favorite of the Saturday crowd, although unable to keep pace with the fast flying Saulspough. Between race events, the crowd was entertained with concert by the Legion band and the free acts, and late in the day by a thrilling balloon ascension, in which the balloon did not come to earth for some time. All concessions were operating in full blast until a late hour, when the 1930 Gibson county fair was history.

The finest weather prevailed throughout the week, it not being necessary to curtail any of the program, as in the past. The weeks attendance was large, particularly for the night fairs.

A good sized crowd milled about the fairgrounds, Sunday afternoon, even though the fair, officially closed Saturday, due to concessions and attractions remaining for Labor Day.

Tragic Finale of Pennsylvania Fete

Plunging from a high altitude, this runaway plane buried all but its tail in the roof of the former Central High School at Harrisburg as Governor Fisher and thousands of spectators paused aghast during the ceremonies of dedicating the new Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Bridge. The plane, carrying Pilot Bernard Wouters, and his passenger, Morris Bowman, of New Holland, went into a nose dive. Both were taken to the Harrisburg Hospital, where it was said their injuries were serious. (International Newsweek)

City Thronged For Great Union Labor Celebration; Parade, Fairgrounds Program

CITY ASTIR EARLY FOR EVENT STREET PAGEANT AT 10 A.M.—FAIR GROUNDS PROGRAM UNTIL LATE AT NIGHT.

Princeton and entire community was astir early Monday, Labor Day, for the gigantic union labor celebration being held in this city under auspices of the Southern Indiana Labor Day Association. Business and various forms of labor generally were suspended for the holiday.

With excellent weather prevailing, this was expected to be the greatest union labor celebration ever held throughout this entire section. Committees had labored for many months on plans for the event and nothing had been left undone for its success. City and state police and special officers were on duty, handling the great volume of traffic and keeping the parade route open for spectators.

The city was thronged for the events of the day, thousands of visitors coming from a wide radius. Thousands banked the streets for the gigantic parade at 10 a.m. and were expected to throng the fair grounds during the day and evening for an extensive program, all of which is absolutely free to everyone.

The celebration officially got underway with the grand parade, moving from south Main street, around the south, west and north sides of the public square, out north Main to Spruce, west into the fair grounds, around the race track in review before the judges on the free attraction platform, in order to permit all parade displays of union labor unions and merchants to be judged for prizes.

laughter and excitement. Lynn was in the city Sunday, ready for his fight and declares Wilson is a mighty neat scrapper.

Practically all concessions, along with the McClellan shows and rides, the Methodist hospital, Red Cross and Boy Scout tents, are remaining on the grounds through Labor Day. The grounds were placed in good shape for the celebration.

There's something doing every minute Monday, from the early parade lineup in the morning until a late hour at night, at the fairgrounds, where union labor's hosts will hold sway.

Patrolman English obtained a clue and went to the Bell residence Sunday night. In the meantime, Patrolman Fox was in the fairgrounds looking for the youth. When Bell arrived home, he was placed under arrest by English, who had remained there.

TWO MEN WILL ASCEND TODAY WITH BALLOON

Here's something new and novel that everyone will want to see—and no doubt everyone will witness—at the Labor Day celebration in the fair grounds Monday afternoon.

That event will be that two men, instead of the customary one man, will make the balloon ascension and parachute leap, with the one balloon when it leaves Mother Earth for a flight that will be entertainment feature for the throngs. This announcement was made late Sunday by celebration officials.

Now, just how this will be done, in view of it being something decidedly new in this section, remains to be seen, but everyone can rest assured that the balloon ride and parachute leaps, made by two men, will provide thrills galore.

He is on the Labor Day program here for an address at the fair grounds, as one of the leading speakers secured for the occasion.

O. L. Collins and Henry Jones, with handsaw and guitar, furnished special music appropriate to the occasion, for the Sunday evening meeting.

The winner will play Princeton Independents at 3:15 p.m. This will be the first bill of the kind here this season and the public is urged to turn out for these games.

Patoka lost a heart-breaker at Decker Sunday afternoon by a 6 to 5 score in a return meeting of the teams. Decker also having won at Patoka a few weeks ago.

Princeton was also defeated Sunday by a one run margin, Grayville, Ill., winning on the Grayville field by a 7 to 6 score.

GRASS FIRE

Responding to a call at 9 o'clock Saturday night, city firemen found a grass fire off Ohio street, along the Southern railroad tracks.

The celebration officials got under way with the grand parade moving from south Main street, around the south, west and north sides of the public square, out north Main to Spruce, west into the fair grounds, around the race track in review before the judges on the free attraction platform, in order to permit all parade displays of union labor unions and merchants to be judged for prizes.

Prizes Offered

In addition to cash prizes for the parade floats or other displays, the miners locals have in competition a silver loving cup, which must be won three times by any local to become the permanent property of that local. Cash prize is also offered for the best window display of union made goods, bearing the union label, in stores around the public square and one block each way off the public square. Window display judges began their work at 7 a.m.

Many floats, some of them exceptionally elaborate, have been built in recent weeks for the parade and some were brought long distances. A number of these, either built here or brought to this city in advance of the celebration, were housed in garages. Princeton American Legion band was engaged to head the parade and play at the fair grounds, afternoon and evening. Many other musical organizations were engaged for the parade.

The fair grounds program, given in detail elsewhere in this issue, was to start immediately after the parade had disbanded and the floats had been parked in the center ring.

Among the noted speakers of the day are M. Cliff Townsend, of the state Farm Bureau; Fred N. Aten, of Columbus, Ohio, international representative of railway carmen; T. N. Taylor, president, and Adolph J. Fritz, secretary of the state Federation of Labor; William Mitch, Terre Haute, secretary-treasurer of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America.

Then of course there is the Legion band program, balloon ascension in late afternoon, tug-of-war, horseshoe pitching, etc.

In addition to band music and free acts at night, the big attraction is a boxing show. Princeton's own pug, Joe Lynn, is appearing in the 8-round feature bout with Rip Wilson, a tough boy of Louisville, Ky., and this in itself insures a whirlwind scrap. There will, of course, be the usual preliminary bouts and the whole card will be topped off with a battle royal, promoted by Ted Cole. A battle royal was staged by Cole at the fair last year and his bouts of five colored mitt welders always create plenty of
