With a bright sun and the finest weather conditions generally, the stage was all set for the gigantic Union Labor Day celebration of the Southern Indiana Labor Association, in Princeton, Monday.

Business and industry generally were at a standstill, following the usual custom of this great holiday. Schools of Gibson county were practically all closed, along with those of Washington, Ind., which this year entered the celebration for the first time.

At an early morning hour, visitors began to arrive in the city, along with many handsome floats, bands, union labor organizations, for the day's festivities.

Everything was in readiness for the gigantic parade of labor unions, floats, bands, Farm Bureau, decorated cars, etc., at 10 a.m. as a starter for the celebration. The parade displays, along with store window displays of union made goods, are being judged for cash prizes, as well as the loving cup being in competition among the miners locals. Upon reaching the fairgrounds, the parade was to circle the track in review before the judges and throngs of spectators.

For the past several days, construction work has been under way on many floats and other displays. During the week-end, finishing touches were put on many handsome floats in Princeton, including Shopcrafts, miners, Farm Bureau and business firms displays. Some of the finest creations were the result. Most of these floats were kept in garages and other buildings over the city, awaiting the parade hour.

As the parade time rapidly approached, all highways leading to Princeton were dense with traffic, with state, city and special police on duty. Thousands continued to arrive, with every indication the celebration would be by far the largest ever held in this entire section.

Following the parade, a most extensive program of speeches by noted men and of entertainment features will be given, during every minute of Sveneteen men of Oakland City, who were alleged to have been beaten by a mob while enroute to work at the Liberty coal mine last June 8, are planning to present claims for compensation for the alleged injuries, it was reported Saturday.

The victims will no doubt apply first to the Lynch Coal Operators Reciprocal Association, an organization which pays mine claims in Indiana, with whom the men were injured. If this company does not pay the claims the next step will probably be to take the cases before the State Industrial Board.

QUARTETTE SCORES HIT.

As a prelude to the Labor Day celebration in Princeton, a sacred concert and religious service, under auspices of the Southern Indiana Labor Day Celebration, were held Sunday afternoon in the amphitheater at the fairgrounds.

Approximately 2500 persons were seated in the amphitheater for this largest and first open-air service of the kind ever held here. Many other persons were on the midways.

The service, along with others over the United States, was recommended by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Rev. H. Cecil Fellers, pastor of the Broadway Christian church, gave the invocation and was in charge of the program.

The Roundhouse Singers, a colored male quartette of Atlanta, Ga., sang spirituals. All members of the quartette, which is remaining for the Monday celebration, are roundhouse employes of the Southern Railway shops at Atlanta.

Dr. L. C. Jeffrey, pastor of the First Methodist church, delivered a fine sermon on the subject "A Spiritual Conception of Labor." This was one of the best labor sermons ever heard here.

The quartette again delighted with negro spirituals and generously responded to encores.

Rev. Fellers made announcements concerning the Monday celebration, and Dr. Jeffrey pronounced the benediction, following which the Graham Farms Band, of Washington, Ind., delighted with a concert. The band was to have opened the program, but was delayed by a slight mishap en route here.

The entire program was carried to many persons over the grounds and in cars in the infield by use of an excellent amplifying system, secured from an Evansville firm.
