

U.M.W.A. PROPOSED WAGE SCALE

SCALE SAID TO BE DAY-OPERATORS PESSIMISTIC OUT-

LOOK FOR SETTLEMENT.
CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 1.—(UP)—Representatives of the United Mine Workers of Illinois were meeting here this afternoon for consideration of a suggested wage scale so low that the operators feared it would not be ratified even if accepted.

While representatives of the miners deliberated, the operators delegates waited at the auditorium hotel for the final re-action on the scale. The operators have informed the union is the highest they are willing to pay in view of the industry's present economic condition.

W. L. Jenkins, of St. Louis, president of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association and head of the joint wage scale committee, while waiting for the miners' delegates, discussed the outlook for the United Press in a pessimistic vein. Previously, during the conferences, he had been cheerful.

"If the union accepts our suggested scale, it will not go into effect and the mines will not re-open unless the miners themselves ratify it in a referendum that would be taken by the local unions," Jenkins said.

"More than one-half of the miners in the state are now at work. They are receiving wages that are larger than those we feel able to offer them. Undoubtedly, many would vote against our offer. The idle miners probably could be in favor of it. But they might be in the minority".

Known to be something above $6.00 a day, the operators' proposed wage scale was kept secret until the very last. It was a certainty that the Jacksonville scale of $7.50 a day and $1.08 an hour was doomed not only in the Illinois field, but as a result of the situation in the Illinois field, loomed in all other fields.

John L. Lewis, international president, was here as an observer because of the importance of the Illinois settlement in other states where none has been made.
