Record Crowd Attends Greatest Celebration; Fine Program Given

For a number of years, the celebrations staged by the Southern Indiana Labor Day Association have literally been the talk of the country. And Monday, everybody was talking a plenty, as a crowd conservatively estimated at 40,000 people, banked the parade route and then packed and jammed the big amphitheater and the midways at the Gibson county fairgrounds for the greatest union labor celebration ever held in this section and possibly in the state.

From early morning, cars and other vehicles were parked on practically every side street in the city, while there was literally an unending stream to the fairgrounds, for the grand street parade. The fairgrounds infield, the hill at northwest part of the grounds toward Coal Mine Row, the section south and west of the amphitheater, as well as spaces out of the grounds, were filled to overflowing with cars. It was the greatest crowd ever assembled here for any event.

The opening event of the seventh annual celebration was the big street parade, finest ever witnessed here. The long line, with Henry J. Fritz, this city, grand marshal, riding in a roadster and carrying an American flag, left Main and Water streets at 10 a. m., moved around the south, west and north sides of the public square, out north Main street to Spruce, west into the fairgrounds and passed in review before the free attraction platform for judging for parade prizes.

Branch Community bands—headed various divisions and unions in the gorgeous pageant. The Princeton Legion band heading the parade and playing all programs at the fairgrounds. Behind the C. L. was ill. This local was awarded the handsome loving cup, in competition among miners locals only. The cup, won twice previously by Enos, must be won three years by any one local to become permanent property of that local. Francisco local No. 3457 had a huge float most original, done in black, which represented the interior of a mine. In this cross-section of the mine were a real mine motor and coal car, brought to the surface and painted for this display. Blackfoot local No. 352, with the men employed at the Blackfoot, formerly known as the Gray strip mine near Arthur, Pike county, has 185 members, of which 180 were in the parade. This local had a fine float, which included a mine tippie and with operations being conducted. This local captured first cash prize among the locals and the Southern Shopcrafts, with the many fine displays, was awarded second prize. It was also mentioned that Enos local 5179 has 195 members, of which 188 participated in the march.

Three merchants who judged the union floats for prizes were Henry J. Maurer, Boonville; Harold Chappell, Oakland City and Rudolph Hillman, Princeton. Union men who judged the business floats, with J. C. Penney Co. and Style Shop capturing first and second prizes, respectively, were George Martin, Boonville; Theodore Kays and Arch Smith, Princeton. They also judged the displays of union made goods in store windows on the public square and one block each way off the public square, the Alva Levi, Inc., store winning the only prize offered. This display of mens union made wearing apparel was arranged by C. J. Snyder of the firm; his son, Carl and Paul Watt.

After the parade had disbanded at the fairgrounds, Mayor O. T. Brazelton gave an address of welcome and M. Cliff Townsend, of the State Farm Bureau, delivered a brief, but most interesting address. Following the noon hour, short talks were given by Thomas N. Taylor, president of the Indiana State Federation of Labor; William Mitch, of Terre Haute, secretary-treasurer of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America and later an ad-

Grand Parade

Six bands—Princeton American Legion, Boodyville Community, Patoka Community, Petersburg City, Jasper American Legion and Ft. Branch Community bands—headed various divisions and unions in the gorgeous pageant. The Princeton Legion band heading the parade and playing all programs at the fairgrounds. Behind the C. L. U. floats of Princeton and Boonville and the speakers cars were the building trades.

Then came the Southern Railway shopcrafts in a long division and with hundreds of marchers, each local being headed by a suitable float or other display that attracted the attention of the crowds.

Division No. 3, United Mine Workers of America, was in itself a sight to behold. Hundreds of marchers, most of them in special uniform attire, were in line. Included in the march of most note were Francisco mine No. 2 local No. 3457, Blackfoot (formerly known as Gray mine) local No. 352, of Oakland City; and Enos local No. 5179. These and several others, marching delegations were headed by floats, most original and elaborate, as well as novel to the extreme. Floats of the strip mines carried out the idea of stripping shores and the mines in operation. Mine locals from all over southern Indiana, even including those where the men have not been employed for some time, participated, this manifesting the finest spirit. Of interest was a delegation of miners, along with the ladies auxiliary, that had come from Chandler.

Miscellaneous displays, including bakers, barbers, business floats, etc., followed the miners division and the rear of the long line was brought up with a string of automobiles, including garage displays. Some of the business floats were the finest ever seen here. Those deserving special mention were put in the parade by the J. C. Penney Co., with a handsomely decorated automobile and a big float. The Style Shop, with a big float on which ladies wearing apparel was displayed by living models; the T. C. Fowler bakery, float which bore the replica of a huge cake which had been carved.

After the parade had passed in review before the tremendous crowd at the fairgrounds and the judges, the display winners were announced by Judge Claude A. Smith, of the Gibson circuit court, who presided over the speaking program. The local unions displays were judged, on both display and attendance.

Large Miners Attendance

Francisco local No. 3457, members of which are employed at mine No. 2 has 700 members, of which 160 were in the parade, it being stated that one man made 2000 in the public square and one block each way off the public square. The Alva Levell, Inc., store winning the only prize offered. This display of mens union made wearing apparel was arranged by C. J. Snyder of the firm; his son, Carl and Paul Watt.

After the parade had disbanded at the fairgrounds, Mayor O. T. Brazelton gave an address of welcome and M. Cliff Townsend, of the State Farm Bureau, delivered a brief, but most interesting address. Following the noon hour, short talks were given by Thomas N. Taylor, president of the Indiana State Federation of Labor; William Mitch, of Terre Haute, secretary-treasurer of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America and later, an address by Fred N. Aten, of Columbus, O., carmen, who was the headline speaker carmen, who was the head line speaker of the afternoon.

Finest Entertainment

The afternoon and evening entertainment program was by far the most extensive ever arranged for the southern Indiana Labor Day celebrations. Free acts and other features were of the finest, being new to this city. The free acts included SI and Mandy, who were literally screams with their speeches, songs and dances and with SI as the free acts announcer; Geraldine and Bobby, aerial ladder act; Merrill brothers and sister, equilibrist; Maccodon brothers, parallel bar act; Floyd Merrill, novelty wire act; Gour-dine sisters, aerial butterflies, teeth act; Merrill brothers in their high perch act; Geraldine and Bobby in their thrilling aerial loop-the-loop. The aerial acts were worked without a net. All appeared, both afternoon and evening.

The tug of war was held on the race track, six husky miners winning over six husky shopcrafts men in two successive pulls. The miners were awarded a box of union made cigars, brought from Boonville.

The balloon ascension, with the chute rider alighting some three and a half miles northeast of the city, was a late afternoon feature. Announcement had been made that two men would make the ascension and leaps, but a mishap earlier in the day prevented the second man from making the ride.

Colored Quartette Great

A feature of the celebration which literally carried the crowd by storm, were songs by a colored male quartette from St. Louis, who played all of their own accomplishments and gave many numbers, mostly popular nature, afternoon and evening. This quartette was furnished by R. J. Weber Theatrical Agency of St. Louis.

Tuesday morning, following the announcement that the mine was ready for work. The usual whistle signal was given Monday night and this was repeated Tuesday morning, but none of the employees responded to the announcement.

The United Mine Worker's agreement completed some months ago contains a provision against hoisting coal between the hours of 6 o'clock p. m. and 6 o'clock a. m., known as the night hoisting clause or double shift work.

The company published a statement in The Daily Democrat Saturday and also an advertising notice that the mine would be ready for opening.

This matter is now in the federal court for this district of Indiana and the case will doubtless come up for hearing at the next term of court.

Neither the company or the officials of the miners were available for a statement Monday.

speaking program from the bandstand. Judge Smith presented officials of the Labor Day organization, who had worked tirelessly for months on plans for the great celebration; Prof. Irvin L. Oster, director of the splendid Princeton American Legion Band and his wife. Just prior to introducing Fred N. Aten for an address, the judge declared himself in no uncertain terms as favoring old age pensions. He declared seven states have the old age pensions now.

Amplifiers Used

The entire program was broadcast to the thousands in the amphitheater and in the grounds by Radio Amplifiers Co., of St. Louis, through sub-letting of a contract by Illinois Radio Engineers. The large amplifiers carried the program most clearly. Microphones were used at the bandstand and free attraction platform. Without these amplifiers, it was evident the program could not have been such a great success, at least from the public standpoint.

A tremendous amount of credit for this Labor Day celebration, declared by the speakers to be the greatest they had ever attended anywhere, anytime, goes to the Southern Indiana Labor Day Association organization, officers of whom are: Elmer Whitman, Princeton, president; Andrew Witherow, Oakland City, vice-pres.; Thomas Elsfielder, Princeton, secretary and Dale Skelton, Princeton, treasurer. There were of course, many committee members and others who have worked throughout the summer months in promoting the gigantic celebration and while space will not permit using names of all of them greatest credit goes to everyone. "Bigger and better every year" is the Labor Day Address organization slogan.

"Shorter working hours and an increase in wages was the solution to the unemployment problem now confronting the country," as given by Fred N. Aten, international representative of Carmen, speaking at the Labor Day celebration at the fair grounds Monday afternoon.

In the opening statements of his address, Mr. Aten landed Princeton and Gibson county on its unemployment situation, stating that in this community there were only 327 men out of employment, that there was not one empty business house in Princeton.

This, the speaker said, is the direct result of organized labor, which is 85% in Gibson county.

"The labor movement has come to the stage where it needs no introduc- tion to the public, he continued. The masses are in favor of this wonderful movement. It has stood for progress since its inauguration about 40 years ago.

"Organization work in the pioneer days was difficult. Little money was allowed for expenses and antagonism was great. Workers got about the country in what is known as "side door pullmans" and were not able to communicate with the leaders as they are today."

Mr. Aten stated that he had ad- dressed many labor crowds in the cities, where many thousands were in attendance, but stated that he had never had the privilege or opportunity of attending one such as the one here Monday. He stated that the scene he witnessed here would remain with him for all time to come.

The speaker stated that he had been requested to discuss the effect of the labor movement on the local labor

WEDDINGS

FIELDS-BARNETT

Of interest to many friends here as well as in California, is the wedding of Miss Ruth Fields of Henderson, Ky., to Chester E. Barnett of Berke- ley, Calif. The ceremony took place in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bomberger, Berkeley Hills, overlooking San Francisco Bay, on Sat- urday, August 16, 8 A. M. in the pres- ence of a number of friends and rela- tives. Rev. Wilbur C. Parry performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Freilds of Hender- son, Ky., a graduate of Henderson high school and of Lockyear's Business col- lege of Evansville. The groom is a son of W. A. Barnett, Princeton, and a graduate of Owensville high school, also a graduate of Lockyear's Busi- ness college, where he was prominent in student body and social affairs of that institution.

The bride was very charming in a gown of blue chiffon and cream lace, with accessories to match. Her bridal bouquet consisted of yellow roses, pan- sies and delphinium. Mrs. Charles Hall was matron of honor and Mr. Charles Hall acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a breakfast was served to the bridal party. The table was attractively decorated with pink roses, delphinium and asters.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnett left after the reception for a short honeymoon, af- ter which they will be at home at 2017 Bancroft Way, Berkeley, Calif., where Mr. Barnett is accountant and office manager of the Bomberger Seed com- pany.

YOUR CHEAPEST NECESSITY

YOUR fire insurance dollar pays for indemnity—for immunity against financial loss when calamity overtakes you. But that dollar buys so much more than the indemnity it pays for that it ranks as one of the most effective dollars you spend.

Fire insurance, from the Indemnity standpoint alone, is one of the cheapest of present-day necessities. Its cost has consistently declined for many years—even during the period of war inflation.

And this in spite of the fact that insur- ance service—as rendered by the more than 250 Stock companies constituting the National Board of Fire Underwriters—has multiplied its activities for the public welfare and greatly enlarged their scope.

 The labor movement has come to the stage where it needs no introduction to the public, he continued. The masses are in favor of this wonderful agreement. It has stood for progress since its inauguration about 49 years ago.
 "Organization work in the pioneer days was difficult. Little money was allowed for expenses and antagonism was great. Workers got about the country in what is known as "side door pullmans" and were not able to communicate with the leaders as they are today."

He stated that the scene he witnessed here would remain with him for all time to come.
 The speaker stated that he had been requested to discuss the effect of railroad merging by the local labor men.
 "This is the age of merging," he said. "Many corporations and businesses of various kinds are consolidating. Not long after the war, Congress passed a law authorizing the merging of railroads and mapped out a program where certain companies would consolidate with others. This plan failed to work, the speaker said, and then officials of the different companies took the program into their own hands and united as they pleased.
 "One of the effects that merging of railroads has had, is unemployment. Before the merging program was begun, there were two million men employed by the railroad companies, and now there are only 1,750,000 men employed in this same industry."
 He praised the Miners' organization for their assistance in 1922 following a strike by the Carmen and the Miners. He stated that the Miners were able to adjust their difficulties sooner than were the Carmen and that the Mine organization aided them in supplying food and clothing for the unemployed.
 In closing, the speaker outlined the three outstanding principles of organized labor, giving first the securing of shorter working hours; second, increase in wages, and third, settlement of labor difficulties by peaceful means or arbitration.
