LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

Princeton was host to the largest Labor Day celebration, Monday in the history of organizations in this section of the state.

The capacity of the large Gibson County Fair grounds was taxed to provide room for the thousand or more automobiles that carried the participants from their homes to this city and in a very short time following the arrival of the large parade at the grounds, the seating capacity of the grand stand was filled.

The crowd was handled with a minimum of delay and all the available parking place in Princeton was filled.

The entertainment at the grounds met all expectations and the crowd remained until late in the evening.

All concessions here for the Gibson County Fair remained over for the day and they were busy all day catering to the hot and thirsty visitors.

The management of the affair deserve much credit for the manner in which everything was conducted.

Taxing the capacity of the highways, Labor Day visitors were on the roads Monday from early morning until late at night. They all probably realize today that they "have been someplace."

In its effort to surpass the drought of 1881, the present one is doing a fairly good job. The rain in that year commenced to fall on Aug. 31. This year we had a shower, it was appreciated, but we have ample room for more, if you please.

The children are back to school this morning and after the assignment of their classes, they will start Wednesday to perform their daily task of digging out of the books the right answer that is found in the back pages. Father and mother will be in a bad humor for a few days footing the bills and repairing the the school clothes, but they will be well repaid for this in later years when they see their young hopefuls walk down the graduating stage and receive their diploma.

what the Supreme court of Indiana will do. It hasn't been able to agree unanimously on very many things and there might be just the right division to declare the income tax law unconstitutional. An income tax created under the present constitution would of course be the better method, as threefourths of the constitution does not need changing, but there will be doubt as to the validity of such law and as long as doubt exists the proposition of the convention can be expected to take advantage of it. —Newcastle Courier-Times.

GASOLINE TAX

The state of Indiana is entitled under the law to collect 4 cents on every gallon of gasoline used in an automobile.

The people have a right to demand that this tax be collected and, moreover, distributed to the proper channels. If this tax is not collected some state official is not doing his full duty. That there have been evasions of hundreds of thousands of dollars of the gasoline tax can not be denied in light of recent disclosures.

This situation reflects on every state official who has any
